Veterans Day

It is a day when we celebrate those who served, and are serving in our armed forces in service for our safety and security, and to protect the freedom we so often take for granted.

So, you may ask, how can I thank the men and women who have served our country today? Most veterans don't often look for open recognition. Most who serve just show up and continue what we were taught in the military: help your brothers and sisters, keep them safe, and go do your job. For those who are employed within transit, taking the time to say a simple "thank you" to those who served would mean a lot. Trust me, it means more than most veterans would ever acknowledge.

And what about those in transit we serve by supplying transportation services? How can we thank those customers for serving in the military, protecting our freedoms, and being our customers today? Again a simple "thank you" is a good start, but consider those who need transportation to medical and other services. The next time you feel impatient or inconvenienced by the time it takes to properly secure a customer in a mobility device, someone that literally put their life on the line in service of our country's safety and freedoms, consider the bigger picture. Take the time to be a little more patient but appreciative of who we are transporting and what they have given to be our customer.

On behalf of all veterans, we would like to thank those who provide the transportation and customer service to veterans in need. And to all our fellow brothers and sisters who have served, thank you.
